Works under review or underway

- Barbieri, Katherine, Omar M. G. Keshk, and Brian Pollins. "Data Collection vs. Data Construction: The Role of Assumptions and Coding Rules in Dyadic Trade Data Sets." Revise and Resubmit received July 2008.
- Barbieri, Katherine, Omar M. G. Keshk, and Brian Pollins. 2008. "Codebook for Correlates of War Trade Data Project, Version 2.0." A large scale data collection project that expands upon Barbieri, Kehsk, Pollins, Version 1.0, and Barbieri International Trade Database Version 1.0. Covers the period 1870-2006 and includes bilateral and national trade data for members of the interstate system.
- Reuveny, Rafael and Katherine Barbieri. 2008. "Natural Resource and Civil War." Unpublished manuscript; revisions underway. Part of a multifaceted project with Rafael Reuveny that also includes "How the fittest survive: Resource scarcity, Adaptation, & Military Conflict;" revisions underway.
- Barbieri, Katherine and Ranan Kuperman, Haifa University. "Why Trade with the Enemy?" A project that examines the motivations for trade between hostile communities; differences that may exist between business and government preferences; and the impact of economic interdependence on conflict.
- "It Takes Two: A Response to Hegre" with Richard Alan Peters, Department of Engineering, Vanderbilt University. Unpublished manuscript that explores the mathematical qualities and theoretical assumptions of alternative measures of interdependence. We offer a critique of commonly used operational measures and highlight the problems with measures tied to the "weakest link" assumption.
- "Globalization and Conflict." A multifaceted project that examines the relationship between globalization and various manifestations of violent conflict, including terrorism, civil war, and interstate war.
